THE COTTON MARKET yesterday had not recovered from the apathetic feeling of the day before. Indeed, a revision of New York quotations, which lowered them ic, and 1-16d decline on Orleans cottons in Liverpool, rather contributed to thicken the gloom. Our market was therefore quict, only 1300 bales changing hands. For upper grades prices were steady, but there was very little of that description offering. Holders of low cotton generally showed anxiety to seil, and "soft spots" were found where conessions were freely made to effect sales. Quotations remained unchanged at the close, but they were viewed by many as nominal. Low cottons used for packing by such portions of the States of Arkansas, Mississippi and elsewhere as the winds blew on the cotton crops and the rains helped to fasten there, were still declining; soil for flower pots can be got in this way, it is said, for five cents a pound, Yesterday the quotations of the Memphis cotton exchange were as follows: Festerday Day before.

Laz Issaes says the chroniclers are sawing the air and tearing passion to tatters on the subject of his getting away with cotton-seed. The facts, as he represents them, are that he removed about twenty-four thousand sacks in four days, and he don't believe anybody else could have done better with the means at hand. Twenty-four thousand sacks made fifteen hundred drayloads. Cincinnati Times, Monday evening:

"Mr. John Conley, an old steamboat engineer, died in St. Louis Friday. Captain Adam Poe has sold the steamer Big Foot to parties on the Chattahoochee river, Florida. Captain Isaac Dallis, an old New Orleans and Ohio river steamboatmen, was struck with paralysis at Louisville Saturday morning, and lies in a critical condition at the Louisville hotel. He commenced his career on the river in 1836. Of late years he has commanded steamers in the Louisville and Henderson line. Captain John King, of the Yazco river steamer Emma, died Weather clear and cold. Thermome-ter, 46°. The Andy Baum, owing to a break in her machinery, was com-pelled to give up her trip to Memphis Saturday evening, much to the regret of Captain Vinton, who had a splendid trip engaged. The Audy Baum will not leave until Wednesday, and in the interim Captain Vinton will have an entirely new doctor put in her, instead of repairing the old one. The Baum is one of the safest, staunchest and best appointed steamers in the Memphis trade. The Thomas Sherlock left New Orleans Saturday night for this city with 1100 tons, 30 cabin and 30 deck passengers. Her freight consists in part of 500 barrels molasses, 800 hogsheads sugar, 350 barrels resin, 400 barrels oil, 200 barrels rice, 100 casks old iron, 100 beles rage, and 300 beer kegs. Captain W. J.
